

CHIEF OF OTOLARYNGOLOGY

The College of Medicine at the University of Vermont is seeking both applications and nominations for outstanding candidates for the position of Chief of the Division of Otolaryngology, to be appointed at the rank of Associate or Professor (NTCT) commensurate with years of experience and accomplishments. The Chief also will serve as Clinical Leader of Otolaryngology in our affiliated health care system, Fletcher Allen Health Care. The Chief will be responsible for clinical program development, medical student teaching, residency training and development of research programs.

The applicant must be Board Certified in Otolaryngology and eligible for licensure in the State of Vermont with experience in the administrative, teaching, clinical, and research activities of an academic department of otolaryngology. Candidates with fellowship training in head and neck surgery are encouraged to apply. Preference will be given to candidates with an established research record in clinical or basic sciences.

A curriculum vitae and letter of interest should be sent to:
